

INDIAN SUMMER.

There is a time, just when the frost
Prepares to pave old winter's way,
When Autumn's in a reverie lost,
The mellow day time dreams away;
When summer comes in musing mood,
To gaze once more on hill and dell,
To mark how many sheeps they bind,
And see if all are ripened well.

With balmy breath she whispers low;
The daisies look up and give
Their sweet incense ere they go,
For her who made their beauties live.
She enters 'neath the woodland shade,
Her zephyrs lift the lingering leaf,
And bear it gently where are laid
The loved and lost ones of its grief.

At last, old Autumn, rising fast,
Again his scepter and his throne;
With boisterous hand the tree he shakes,
Intent on gathering all its own.
Sweet summer, sighing, dies the plain,
And waiting Winter, gaunt and grim,
Sees miser Autumn hoard his grain,
And smiles to think it all for him.

Ye in worldly wisdom old—
Ye who bend the knees to gold,
Dost this earth as lovely seem
As it did in life's young dream,
Ere the world has crusted o'er
Feelings good and pure before
Ere ye sold at manum's mart
The best yearnings of the heart?

Grant me, Heaven, my earnest prayer—
Whether life of ease or care
Be the one to me assigned,
That coming year may find
Loving thoughts and gentle words,
Twined with my bosom's chords,
And that age may but ripen
Riper freshness to my heart.

A Brace of Anecdotes.

DEAR OLD "SPIRIT."—A brace of anecdotes, which may serve to amuse some of your readers, I have picked up, and send.

Some years ago there lived in the back part of Dutchess County a rich old farmer, who was a decided reprobate, and, like many other sinners, very much afraid of death. At one time his only son, Ezekiel, was taken ill with the small-pox. The old man was very much afraid of the contagion, and could not be induced to visit his suffering heir. At length Ezekiel was pronounced to be in an almost hopeless condition, and the old man was informed that if he ever wished to speak with him again in this world, he must avail himself immediately of the opportunity.

In a chamber on the ground floor of a wing of the house, fronting on the garden, lay the sick man, covered with pustules, and blind from swelling of the eye-lids.—The father, trembling with fear, went out from the kitchen into the garden, and after finding his way through the usual number of sunflowers, hollyhocks, and marigolds at length reached the open window of the sick room. There crouching on the ground, to remove himself as far as possible from the contagion, he called out, "Zeke?" "What, father?" responded the sufferer.—"Zeke, they say you're right bad, and there's no hopes; try and pray a little, 'cause if yer git well it won't hurt yer, and if yer die it'll be a d—d good thing." It is to be hoped that the parental advice was followed.

The other story I came across in reading the autobiography of Thomas Holcroft—the once well-known play writer. H. supped one evening at Opie's, when, after the cloth had been removed, numerous stories were told, among which was one of a gentleman who, having put out his candle on going to bed, read in blazing phosphorescent characters on his curtain—"Confess thy sins, this night thy soul shall be required of thee." On which the gentleman fell on his knees, and, as expected, began to confess his sins aloud—not from terror, but aware that it was a trick meant to terrify him, devised by a certain waggish young lady in the house; and hearing a little bustle on the stair-head, truly supposed that she and her comrades were there listening. He confessed, as the last and greatest of his sins, that "he had seduced Miss— from the path of rectitude," and declared, if that might be pardoned him, he would never again be so heinously guilty. This turned the tables on the young lady "with a vengeance."

Horses Stiffened and Hoof-Bound.

A horse that is driven on a hard road is liable to get stiffened, I have seen valuable horses driven on our plank-roads a few days, get quite lame. I reasoned to myself of the cause, and produced a remedy which proved effectual. I have since tried it on foundered or hoof-bound horses, and with good result. I made a solution of salt and water, and applied it three times a day, by washing the legs and pouring upon the bottom of his feet and holding them up a few minutes to let it strike in; and saw the wonderful effects in a few days. I account for it in this way: Salt will extract moisture from the atmosphere, which keeps the feet moist all the while, it acts nearly like melted grease upon the foot. The hoof becomes tough but yet pliable. Like a chunk of wood saturated with salt or brine, it is tough, yet moist; and so with a horse's foot. And here let me add, the habit of rasping the cracked hoof to toughen it is folly. Apply your brine and you will effect a cure. Try it and blame me if it does not.—[Ohio Cultivator.]

The Savannah Georgian, after an existence of forty years as a democratic organ, died a few days ago for the want of support.

The President has appointed Dr. James McDowell, of Mo., Consul-General to Constantinople. This gentleman is the oldest son of the late Gov. McDowell, of Va.

The Duke of Malakoff recently gave a dinner in Paris which cost him $1000.—He can afford it, the old sinner, as he has about $50,000 a year and is single.
